DENTISTS IN CLINIC AT ATHENS HOTEL

Several Patients With Molar Ailments Are Treated Free.

TALK ORAL HYGIENE

Lights Were Out During Mayor Moore's Welcoming Address.

In a room in the Athens hotel a little boy sat in a big chair. He was almost hidden from view by the arms of the chair and a white cloth thrown over his body. His knees quivered under the cloth as the man bending over him inserted a shiny instrument and pounded with a little mallet. From time to time the man would stop and explain the process to the spectators who were eagerly watching every movement. Then one spectator would ask a question and the entire circle would join in the argument which followed. And the little boy in the big chair looked on wide-eyed and frightened but said not a word.

In an adjoining chair was a frail little woman, her entire face covered by a rubber veil. A dentist standing beside her was waving a sharp pointed instrument as he argued a point with a student, under the influence of a of this, a most delicate operation.

In yet another chair was a Universal local anesthetic. His wisdom teeth were being removed.

A gray-bearded farmer was occupying another chair, sitting rigidly erect, gripping the padded arms of his seat, waiting the time when "his man" should begin work. At intervals the door would slowly open and a frightened face appear in the doorway. It was another sufferer who wanted his ills attended to.

The above scenes were enacted at the dental clinic this morning, held in connection with the meeting of the North Central and East Missouri Dental Societies. All people who presented themselves were treated free of charge for their molar ailments.

J. B. Sebastian of Baltimore who has just taken out a Missouri dental license gave a clinic upon synthetic porcelain cement. Mr. Sebastian is a member of the National Dental Association and has given clinics before that body.

Among other visitors here from outside of the territory covered by the two associations in session are W. G. Goodrich of Chillicothe, C. P. Sugg of Carrollton and J. R. McCue of Jefferson City, president of the Missouri Dental association.

Exhibits of dentists' appliances and supplies fill two rooms in the hotel. The Ritter Dental Manufacturing Company of Chicago has a modern dental office on exhibition, complete to the electric lights and window shades. Kress and Owen of New York have a large exhibit of Glyco-Thymoline. Other firms exhibiting are: Hettinger Brothers of Kansas City and St. Louis, the Shaw and Nolde Dental Manufacturing Company of St. Louis and the Patterson-O'Brien Dental Supply Company of St. Louis.

It was a dark welcome the visiting dentists received at the opening of their convention last night at the Athens Hotel. The discussion, at the opening meeting was how to get people to listen to instruction on oral hygiene. The roll was called by the light of a single candle. W. P. Moore, mayor of Columbia, protested that he could not see to talk but assured the visitors that if any one policeman or private citizen interfered with them while they were in the city, he, the mayor would deal with the offender. Then the darkness ended.

Dr. J. F. McClellan, president of the North Central Missouri Dental Association, led a spiritual discussion among the members of the convention on the subject of oral hygiene.

Dr. McClellan said that if people could be taught to keep their mouths clean the general conditions of health would be vastly improved.

Several of the members deplored the fact that the matter was looked upon so unfavorably by people connected with the public schools. Oral hygiene includes many other things besides the care of the mouth, but it was pointed out that this is one of the important parts of health keeping.

Following the discussion of the president's paper, Dr. J. H. Kennerly of St. Louis and Dr. R. L. Lockridge of Columbia read technical papers.

GEROULD IMPRISONED AS SPY

Former M. U. Librarian Held Three Weeks in Berlin Jail.

J. T. Gerould, former librarian here, and now with the University of Minnesota, spent three weeks of his vacation this summer in a German prison at Berlin. Mr. Gerould was commissioned to buy books for the library of a new university in British Columbia. He was in Berlin when the war broke out and was seized as a spy.

Library plans were found upon him, and since they were connected with British Columbia, they only confirmed the suspicions of his captors. He was put in prison. For three weeks all his efforts for release were in vain. He finally succeeded in getting a message to an influential friend in Berlin. The German authorities set him free after he had been identified and vouched for by a German citizen.

$3.35 RATE TO KANSAS GAME

Athletic Committee Discusses Where Team Will Stay.

Prof. C. L. Brewer announced to the Athletic Committee last night that the rate to Lawrence for the Kansas game would be $3.35 round trip.

The alumni in St. Louis have arranged an excursion for the Washington game here at a $3 round-trip rate.

The committee discussed the matter as to where the football team would stay before the Kansas game. Although the place has not been definitely decided on, it was thought that the team would remain in Columbia until two days before the game.

The prices for the Kansas game will be $2 for all bleacher seats and $2.50 for all box seats.

Confidence and Advertising Resultfulness

Perhaps the most important reason why advertising in the Missourian is so carefully read is because of the classes of advertising that the Missourian will not accept at any price.

The following classes of advertising are not accepted: patent medicines and medical, get-rich-quick schemes, spirituous liquors, cigarettes, advertising attacking competitors, or any advertising considered fraudulent or misleading.

This is quoted from the Missourian's public rate card that is on file with all advertisers. Here is another paragraph from the same rate card.

The Missourian considers the interests of its readers paramount and no advertising of any kind is accepted that is considered detrimental to their interests.

In short---if your product is all right and you treat your customers right, your advertisement in the Missourian will be resultful because Missourian readers have confidence in its advertising columns.

Confidence Means Advertising Results
